Soviet troops were invited into Afghanistan by the Marxist Kabul government under terms of a Soviet-Afghan treaty.

"We will be ready to commence withdrawal of troops as soon as all forms of outside interference against the people and government of Afghanisian are permanently terminated," the 73-year-old Soviet leader declared.

He added that "we and our allies will be able to stand up for ourselves and succeed in repulsing any hostile allies,"

Brezhnev appeared puffy-faced and tired, but he delivered his toughly worded 40minute speech in a strong voice.

He accused the United States of increasing tension in the Middle East and Asia and said the Carter administration's reaction to "events in Afghanistan" was forcing Soviet troops to remain in Afghanistan.

Brezhnev contended that since the Soviet troops had been requested, "why then is Washington going into hysterics on a global scale! What are the aims of Washington in spreading lies about the Soviet war against African .: 3n?"

"Washington is only looking for a pretext for broadening its presence in Asia," he said. "The main thing is that the United States has decided to create a network of military bases in the countries of the Indian Ocean, the countries of the Middle East and the countries of Africa. "The United States wants to pump out unimpeded those countries' national wealth" and use military bases there for attacks against socialist countries. Brezhnev said.

At least three persons were killed Friday in Kabul where massive anti-Soviet protests were mounted despite almost continuous gunfire, according to foreign reports from the Afghan capital.

The city appeared in the grips of crisis," said one report received in New Delhi. A separate report, whose source also declined to be identified, said there was a "fair amount" of shooting.

Toward PLO

THE HAGUE, Netherlands, Feb. 22 (AP) A gradual change in official and public attitudes in the Netherlands to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict in the Middle East was underlined this week by a meeting in Damascus between a high level government official and the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Government officials bere were quick to emphasize the meeting was not "official," though approved by the foreign ministry.

To label the meeting official would be to imply recognition of the PLO, said one government source, and "we cannot do that while their avowed aim is the destruction of the stale of Israel."

However, the meeting between Naboth Vam Dijl, head of the Dutch foreign ministry's Directorate for Africa and the Middle East, and Abdel Hassan Abu Maizer, a member of the PLO's executive committee and head of its imternational affairs department, was initiated by the Dutch.

It followed informal contacts between Dutch ambassadors and officials with the PLO over the past year or so, within the framework of the dialogue between the European Economic Community and the Arab League and the Dutch participation in the U.N. peacekeeping force in southern Lebanon, Last month a group of Dutch Parliamentarians met PLO leader Yasser Arafat during a visit to Syria and Lebanon.

The Damascus meeting Monday was part of an effort by the Netherlands, traditionally pro-Israeli, to cultivate contacts with the PLO to achieve an even-handed policy. The official PLO news agency WAFA said the talks were "frank and friendly" and "consi-dered ways and means of expanding bilateral relations between the PLO and Holland."

But the Dutch foreign ministry added that Van Dijl also asked the PLO to consider its expressed attitude to Israel. The meeting came three and a half months after the Dutch Parliament called on the government to make more contacts with the PLO in a motion that reflected a slow but perceptible change in the Dutch view toward the Middle East, and the Israeli-Palestinian situation. Government and other sources said traditional sympathy for the state of Israel is no longer taken for granted in the Netherlands. More people are now aware of the position of the Palestinians and many believe they should no longer be denied the right of an independent state.

A recent survey indicated that no fewer than 91 per cent of Dutchmen think the Palestinians have a right to their own state, but still 57 per cent of those questioned said they had much sympathy for Israel. Only three per cent said they had no sympathy at all for Israel.

A similar survey in 1977 indicated that 43 per cent of the Dutch were in favor of a Palestine state. Though the figures are not directly comparable because of the different wording of questions, they show clearly that increased sharply over the past few years.

Both Israeli and Palestinian supporters in the Netherlands agree there have been changes in attitudes and policies in favor of the Palestinians, but they differ over the

One Israeli source attributed the change 10 Holland's need "to keep friendly with the people who produce the oil.

For its part, the Dutch foreign ministry said though Holland was the only country in Europe affected by a direct boycott during the 1973-74 oil crisis, it was not oil alone that had brought changes. Rather, the ministry said, it is the "whole

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 - The Carter administration bas asked Britain to take the lead on a new initiative to solve the Palestinian problem, diplomatic sources bere said.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, has told Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington that the U.S. will support a British proposal for a new U.N. Security Council resolution to supplement U.N. Resolutions 242 and 338, the sources said, Britain is expected to press hard for the new resolution, which would recognize the Palestinians right to self-determination.

President Carter is reductant to take a strong public stand in favor of Palestinian rights at this time, sources said. His political estand could cos cial Jewish votes in the upcoming primary elections, particularly now that his Democratic rival Senator Edward Kennedy is going all-out to woo the support of the American Jewish community.

Carter believes a British initiative on the Palestinians, supported by France and perhaps other Western European states, would buy his administration time, at least until the elections are over in November,

For energy talks

Duncan plans Riyadh trip

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 - Energy Secretary Charles Duncan plans to travel to Sandi Arabia within the next few weeks for talks with Saudi officials on various energy issues, government sources said.

Duncan's trip, which would take place within a week to ten days depending on circumstances, is in response to a Saudi invitation to visit the Kingdom following Saudi Oil Minister Sheikh Ahmad Zaki Yamani's last trip to the United States, the sources said

Duncan plans to use the visit as an opportunity to explore Saudi Arabia's willingness to sell crude oil to the U.S. government for storage in the strategic reserve, according to the sources.

The Carter administration has decided to resume purchases of oil for the reserve which were cut off last year - in an effort to guarantee adequate oil supplies in the event of crisis halts supplies from the Gulf.

The U.S. now has about 100 million barrels of crude oil in storage in underground caverns and salt mines along the Gulf of Mexico coast.

Existing facilities can hold up to 500 million barrels of oil, but a new Energy Department study recommends the reserve capacity be expanded to bold between one and four billion barrels.

During Duncan's upcoming visit to the Kingdom — his first as energy secretary — be is also expected to discuss the world oil market and regional security issues, sources said. American and European dependence on

Arabian Gulf oil was highlighted Wednesday by one of Duncan's aides, Deputy Energy Secretary John Sawhill. Testifying before a Senate committee, Sawhill said that even if the United States, Western Europe and Japan maintain their current oil consumption levels, they will remain as dependent on oil from the Gulf in 1985 as they are now. This means that "any massive interruption of oil supplies from the region would have a severe impact on the economies of the free world," Sawbill warned. In 1979, the United States depended on Arabian Gulf oil for 31 per cent of its total supply. But because of an expected drop in U.S. domestic production, Sawhill said the U.S. will have to increase its imports from the area to 35 per cent io 1985.

Europe's dependence on oil from the Gulf will decline marginally from 63 per cent in 1979 to 62 per cent in 1985 — due to higher North Sea production — Sawhill concluded. But Japan, who now imports 73 per cent of its oil from the region will remain as dependent on supplies from Gulf in 1985 as it was in Sawhill made his forecast before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which is beginning a series of hearings on energy and political issues in Southwest Asia, He told the senators that in 1979, the estimated world demand for Arabian Gulf oil was 20.7 million barrels daily or 62 per cent of all oil in international trade.

Underlining the importance of the region, Sawhill noted that the Western world's total proven oil reserves are 545 billion barrels. Of these reserves, 370 billion barrels are in the Arabian Gulf.

And the only OPEC countries with enough oil reserves to substantially increase produc-tion, Sawhill said, are Saudi Arabia, Iran, Iraq, Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates - all countries in the Arabian Gulf.

In his lengthy statement to the committee, Sawhill also reviewed the future production capacity for each major oil producing country. According to Sawhill's assessments, political factors — such as the Arab-Israeli conflict - and not economic factors, will ultimately decide the actual level of output in many Gulf nations. To counter continued U.S. dependence on

Gulf petroleum, the energy official said phased decontrol of both oil and gas and substantial conservation measures will play a 'critical role in reducing U.S. dependence on foreign oil."

One counter-measure to the projected heavy dependence on the Arabian Gulf for oil, Sawhill said, will be the standby gasoline rationing plan, which the administration will submit to Congress in March.

The administration's deputy energy secretary said that the synthetic fuels programs must be accelerated and be also urged the Senate panel to consider programs to: Reduce oil use in utilities

- Complete the Alaska north slope gas pipeline

- Lease more offshore areas for drilling Accelerate energy savings in residential and commencial buildings.

CBS confirms Israel A-bomb

American television network CBS has reported that Israel exploded an atomic bomb off South Africa last September, confirming the first report of the blast that appeared in this newspaper almost four months ago.

In its evening newscast Thursday, CBS said it had learned "that Israel exploded a nuclear bomb last September in the Aulantic Ocean off the coast of South Africa, which was conducted with the help and cooperation of the South African government."

The explosion's fireball was detected by an American surveillance satellite passing over the area Sept. 22,

The satellite, one of the VELA series, recorded a double flash of light characterisuc of atomic explosions. But a recent White House study of the satellite's readings was inconclusive, saying there was insufficient evidence to prove a nuclear blast had occurred.

CBS, in its report Thursday, said details of the Israeli nuclear test last September are contained in a new unpublished book by two 1sraeli journalists.

South Africa had offered to help Israel with an atomic test as early as 1966, CBS said, but the Israelis declined at that time. But in 1979, the Begin government wanted to see if its atomic devices worked,

The book may never be published in its present form, since it has not yet passed lsraeli censorship. On Nov. 3, this newspaper published

Israel and South Africa have long had a secret agreement on nuclear cooperation, sources here report.

The Carter administration has solid intelligence information on Israel's atomic test last September, but has so far refused to go on record as admitting that Israel is a full-fledged nuclear power, according to the sources.

The administration fears such an admission would force Arab states to develop their own nuclear capabiliues, thus sparking a nuclear arms race in the Middle East, the sources say.

Exporters to pay 'war-risk' surcharge

By Shirley Kowitz Houston Bureau

HOUSTON, Feb. 22 - Industrial and business firms must oow pay a "war-risk" surcharge io additioo to a bunker fuel charge and a currency adjustment charge when sending goods to the Arabiao Gulf.

Up until Jan. 26, the shipping lines had absorbed the cost of "war-risk" insurance but the increasing price of the insurance charge forced shipping lines to pass the cost on to customers io the form of a surcharge, according to James Devine, marketing vice president of Waterman Steamship Corp.

The 8,900 Group, a tariff publishing group operating from the U.S. East Coast, authorized the $3.75 per revenue ton surcharge that is now tacked onto the base freight rate for Parents' lack of concern about giving cars to their adolescent children is among reasons for the rising number of traffic accidents. In recent years, it bas become common for parents to buy cars for their minor children just to imitate what other friends of their sons are doing.

The results of this phenomenon are obvious. We see many borrible accidents in which innocent lives are lost due to rash driving of the adolescents who are, in fact. not grown-up enough to drive a car.

One, however, cannot deny the great advantages of a vehicle as an important means of movement. But it can turn out to be dangerous and lethal machinery if misused, especially by youngsters.

This type of parent becomes the direct cause of death for their young ooes, who either lose their lives as a result of reckless driving or, if destined to live, waste much of their precious time driving and ignoring their studies and other obligations.

It is a result of parent's' carelessness and indifference in providing his son with money and car that he is seen roaming about in the streets all day and burying himself io bed throughout the night. In this way some parents become the cause of gaps io the society.

Parents, in fact, kill their sons by giving them cars. They ruin children and their future because of their negligence. They would bave done better striving to build children ioto educated and good citizens of the future.

merchandise headed to the Arabian Gulf

The London market instituted a mandatory "war-risk" insurance charge to all ships going to the Arabian Gulf last year because of the political unrest io the area. According to insurance brokers, they are concerned that ships going to the area might be trapped (oot allowed to leave) rather than confiscated or destroyed. Merchaot ships were trapped in the Suez Canal during the 1967 war between Israel and Egypt, and merchants were forced to write off their cargo as war-risk losses.

A spokesman for Adams and Porter Insurance Co. said that the primary fear was the closing of the Strait of Hormuz, the entraoce to the Arabiao Gulf, because of the Iranian revolutioo last year. Since that time, the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan has iotensified those fears, he said.

The price of war-risk insurance to shipping companies was fluctuating between twoaod-a-balf cents and 5 cents per $ 100 valuation in January, according to insurance brokers. At present, the charge is 3.75 ceots per $ 100 valuación for ships going to Saudi Arabia. Oo a $75 million (SR252.75 millioo) ship, that amounts to a $ 28,125 (SR94,781) war-risk insurance charge on each trip the vessel makes to the Gulf.

This surcharge comes on top of an everincreasing bunker fuel charge or BAF (bunker adjustment factor) that sbipping companies have added to their base freight rate to compensate for rising cost of fueling

In addition, shipping companies have to make allowances for fluetuating world curreocies with a curreocy adjustment factor (CAF) that is passed on in the form of an extra charge to merchants.

The cost of all these extra charges is affecting the American businessman, according to Roland Garrett of Strachan Shipping Co.

"The cost of shipping is pricing many American businesses out of the market. They cannot compete pricewise with Europe and Japan," Garrett said.

The bunker fuel charge is due to increase from its current price of $ 22.50 (SR75.83) per freight ton for American ships to $ 27.50 (SR92.68) per freight ton in March 16. Japan ships pay a bunker fuel charge of $ 18.00 (SR60.66) per freight ton and Mediterranean ships pay a bunker fuel charge of 20 per ceot of the freight rate or a$ 24,50 (SR82.57) per freight ton maximum, according to Garrett. The charges are affecting shipping companies also, according to Devine. As the cost of transportation goes up, the cheaper commodifies cacoot afford to transport, so the amount of cargo decreases, he said.

The bunker fuel charge was first installed in 1974 and bas been rising ever since. The Concerned ministries and industries have been coosulted since the beginning of the process. The standards have been designed so as not to inhibit the Kingdom's economic development.

The standards would become effective sbortly after approval for an interim period. Once sufficient environmental data has been! gathered to allow the pollution level restrictions contained in the standards to be adjusted as necessary, the interim standards will be submitted to Minister of Defense Prince Sultan for approval as permanent.

The expansion of the Directorate into Meteorology and Environmental Protection agency under the defense ministry was proposed about 10 month ago by the Administrative Reform Committee of the Council of Ministers, but the decision is still pending with Prince Fahd.

The Directorate of Meteorology is authorized to handle environmental affairs in the international sphere, bowever, and Al-Gain bas just returned this week from a meeting in Tunis concerning the Red Sea.

Negotiations for setting up an organization to protect the Red Sea's environment have been underway for some time among representatives of adjacent states. Al-Gain noted in the Sandi Business interview that a similar organization had been set up much faster to protect the Arabian Gulf, because there was a much greater sense of

In many ways, Al-Gain said, more had been accomplished toward protecting the Red Sea: data collection is underway, and the organization already has a data center in Jeddah's National Meteorological Center, an oceanographic institute at King Abdul Aziz University with a research vessel on order, and a fisheries Research Center in Yemen.

The Regional Organization to protect the Marine Environment of the Arabian Gulf was agreed to in 1978, but is still under the auspices of a UNEP interim secretariat until the organization's permanent structure can be established in Kuwait.

Al-Gain will be involved with both the Arabian Gulf and the Red Sea organizations in the coming months. He hopes that the Gulf representatives will meet soon to elect a secretary general, and that the Red Sea representatives will prepare a draft of an agreement that can be signed by official representatives at a subsequent meeting.

Saudia to expand system of computerized booking

By fod Robberson Houston Burean

HOUS FON, Feb. 22 - Saudia, the first airline in Saudi Arabia to introduce a computerized flight-booking and reservation system, soon will expand its computer capabilities at its three main terminals in the kingdom and in two foreign offices.

Ed Morrissey, manager of reservations for Saudia's Jeddah offices, said the airline plans to add two new features to its computer system. In July, the airline will install computer-operated ticketing at the airport terminals in Jeddah, Riyadh, Dbahran, London and Cairo. Saudia also plans to install a "departure control" computer-operated boarding pass printer in the new Jeddah International Airport in time for the airport's opening in January 1981.

Morrissey said the new compter-operated services will eliminate the time-consuming process of registering and nicketing passengers by hand. With the computerized operation, the ticketing agent will be able to confirm reservations, print destination information on tickets and issue boarding passes through the computer's video display unit.

Saudia first installed computer terminals in its reservation offices in February 1978. The computer "brains," as Morrissey calls them. are located in London and are operated by Saudia under a contract with British Airways. The main computer is and IB.M I-PARS sys-1em coupled with Raytheon video display

Morrissey said the airline bopes 10 move the main computer to the Jeddah offices sometime in 1982, and it will be completely operated by Saudia personnel.

"In my office at Jeddah, if I want to know. for example, how many seats are available on a flight to Riyadh, the message has to travel through as many as 20 terminals before I get my answer back," Morrissey said.

Zia said the purpose of Pakistan's advance toward the goal of self-sufficiency in defense is to protect the country's territorial integrity. But, because of resource constraints, self-

Libyan unity plan dismissed by Algeria

ALGIERS, Feb. 22 (R) - Algeria has gently hrushed aside a Libyan report suggest-ing that the two neighboring North African countries might merge.

The Polithuro of the governing National Liberation Front (FLN) said in a statement Wednesday night that the basis of relations with Libya was a communique issued after Libyan head of state Muammar Qaddafi met the late Algerian President Houari Bonmedienne in southern Algeria in December 1975.

That document said the two countries would try to achieve closer relations hut fell short of calling for unification.

.The statement was apparently a response to a report Tuesday by the Libyan news agency JANA which quoted Algerian Interior Minister Bonalem Benhamouda as saying his country was ready to merge with

The report, issued at the end of a visit to Tripoli by Benhamouda, caused embarrassment in Algeirs.

The JANA story was seen in Algiers as an attempt to drag Algeria into Qaddafi's unionist plans, informed sources said.

Heiden sweep continues

LAKE PLACID, Feb. 22 (AP) - Eric Heiden swept to his fourth speed skating gold medal of the 1980 Winter Olympics Thorsday smashing another record with a winning time of 1 minute, 55.44 seconds in the 1,500-meter race.

Norway took both the silver and bronze

Heiden thus became the first man in history to win four gold medals in a single winter Olympics. The powerful 21-year-old skater has one more race in these games, skating in Saturday's 10,000-meter event in a bid to complete a five gold medal sweep.

Tiny Liechtenstein claimed its first winter Olympic gold medal ever when Hanni Wenzel won the women's giant slaion in a combined time of 2:41.66. Irene Epple of West Germany won the silver and the bronze went to Perrine Pelen of France.

It was the third medal of these games for Liechtenstein.

Liverpool is unbeaten at home for 56 matches, but 1pswich's current form gives it a real chance of upsetting the Mcrseysiders and re-opening the championship race.

That league race is currently dominated by one team - Liverpool, Bob Paisley's team leads Manchester United by three points and holds a game in hand.

Ipswich, which has moved from 22nd in October to third place this week, is the only other club with a realistic chance of taking the championship.

Fourth placed Southampton would appear too far adrift, while European champion Nottingham Forest spured a chance of making up lost ground by losing 2-0 to well-drilled Liverpool Tuesday night.

ELUSIVE WESTERN UNITY

U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance's present European tour shows, by its very undertaking, that the Western alliance is far from united in its response to Sovict expansionism, as exemplified most recently by the attack on Afghanistan. Those who have hoped for an immediate, strong and united Western response are right to feel disappointed.

The start of the Vance mission coincided with the expiry of the time limit set by President Carter, within which the Soviet armies were to leave Afghanistan if America was to take part in the Moscow Olympics. It is therefore certain now that the Americans will not compete in Moscow this summer,

The European community member states chose to make public their own stand on the Afghanistan crisis on the eve of Vance's visit. Their solution was that, in exchange for a Soviet withdrawal, Afghanistan would be declared a neutral country, with its status as such quaranteed by the international community. The Soviet Union, it is certain, would find this less than satisfactory, for it would rather have a thoroughly subjugated Afghanistan than a neutral one. Yet it is also certain that they would consider such a proposal in one of two eventualities: If the Soviet presence in Afghanistan becomes 100 costly from the military point of view (rather a remote eventuality at present;) or if it thought that a withdrawal would be more profitable than a continued occupation.

For the Soviet leadership to be convinced that a withdrawal is the best course, several conditions have first to obtain. Among these is the Western unity in the face of the invasion which Vance is seeking to weld in his present effort. But it must be recognized that, though certainly important, this condition is not the decisive one. And that together with the other conditions, it stands or falls on a primary consideration, which is purely internal to Afghanistan.

This is the feeling of the people of Afghanistan themselves on the Soviet intervention. For it has to be recognized that had the people of Afghanistan really been a willing party to Soviet designs, no one would have had the right to object. But the fact is that the vast majority of the Afghanistan people rejected utterly this violation of their sovereignty, and resisted it with all their might. There is no question that they will carry on fighting as long as the invading force

The Islamic resistance is augmented by the feeling of shock in the Islamic and Third World, which sees this violation as a direct threat to its own sovereignty. This feeling has to be translated into concrete political and military terms: The resistance must be given all political and material help to sustain and increase its pressure against the invading power. The Soviet Union must be made aware of the political cost of its blunder as well as the military one.

This is the second condition, and is in increasing obtainment, despite some waverers in the ranks who, for reasons of political expediency preferred to keep silent as an independent, nonaligned nation was so cynically violated. And it is only after it that the role of the Western alliance in facing up to Soviet aggression begins.

The Carter administration, no doubt, feels the same bitterness toward its allies as that felt by the majority of the leaders of the Third World toward those who did not dare to stand up and be counted when the need arose. It has been prompt to take its own countermeasures, such as banning the export of wheat and high technology to the Soviet Union, as well as such demonstrations of protest as boycotting the Moseow Olympics. The Americans knew they could not fight a land war with the Soviet Union over Afghanistan, and had to make the weight of their displeasure felt in this way.

But the Americans knew of the hesitancy in Europe to follow suit; hence Vance's visit. France had declared it will not attend the foreign ministerial meeting which was to be convened in Bonn because, it said, it reflected a "confrontationist policy. The Federal Republic of Germany is keeping a low profile, advocating "quiet diplomacy" to solve the problem. Britain, which started out as fully committed to support the American line, has had to align itself with the general European stand, although it says that this detracts nothing from its

It is therefore this third condition which awaits a modicum of fulfilment - that minimal resolution to make the Soviets pay politically and economically for its blunder in Afghanistan, which can make the Soviet leadership recalculate the balance of loss and profit and see the sense of an immediate withdrawal. The European call for a neutral Afghanistan will otherwise fall on deaf ears. The Europeans have to back it with willingness to act in such a way as to give it real

Yugoslavia's fears of Soviet intervention mount

By Louis B. Fleming

BELGRADE -The invasion of Afghanistan has beightened fears of Soviet intervention here in Yugoslavia, where President Tito's independent brand of communism has resisted Kremlin domination for decades.

A former member of the Yugoslav government, expressing openly what officials will not acknow-ledge, said the other day:

The risks of Soviet intervention, after Afghanistan, have increased many times."

A Western military expert said that events in Afgbanistan had "alerted them (the Yugoslavs) that it could very well happen to them - and soon." Their remarks reflected the anxiety that swept Yugoslavia when Soviet troops moved into Afghanistan on Dec. 27, a development that gives Yugoslavs more cause for worry than the deteriorating health of Tito. Many Yugoslavs continue to feel, on reflection, that no Soviet military move is likely here in the near future. But they are nonetheless apprehensive. "I grew up under one occupation - German and I fear another," a middle-aged Yugoslav intellectural said, "I do not want my son to live under an occupation or to fight another war." He was speaking in a crowded cafe, where frivolity seemed to prevail. But he was deadly serious, genuinely afraid. Nevertheless, two things have gone well in the last few weeks:

- The collective leadership, designed to replace the one-man rule of Tito, seemed to be working well. It was not just invented. Some elements have been in place for nine years. - The military call-up system, designed to mobilize more than 5 million fighting men in a matter of hours and activated during the invasion also seemed to work well, although it was given only a partial test.

There is no doubt that the Yugoslavs would resist any attack from outside.

They would fight like caged lions," one Yugoslav predicted.

The military is organized as a grassroots defense.

'The historic roots are in the partisan war against the Nazis," a military expert said. There is a standing Yugoslav army of 260,000 more than half of them conscripts serving 15 to 18 months. Behind them are reserves and the territorial forces scattered throughout the country, counted in the millions - some say at least 5 million - on three-hour call for mobilization. They are equipped with small arms, with mortars and artillery nearby, and many are organized and drilling in their factories and on their farms. "The casualties for an aggressor would be enormous," a Western expert said." We could destroy I0 to 15 divisions, and it would require a substantial force to maintain an occupation," a Yugoslav said.

performance of the collective leadership guarantee political stability or national security in the long

But neither the Yugoslav army nor the recent

Tito has planned his succession with an eye to one thing: balancing power among the jealous, oftenbickering six republics and two autonomous provinces that make up Yugoslavia.

Each must be represented in Communist Party as well as government councils. Thus the party is ruled by a presidium with three members from each of the six republics and two from each of the two provinces, plus one from the army's party organization. The chairmanship rotates annually, providing a further guarantee that no single Serb, Croat or Slovene will rise to individual authority.

Beyond Serbia, Croatia and Slovenia, Yugoslavia consists of the republics of Bosnia Herzegovina, Macedonia and Montenegro, plus the provinces of ojvodina and Kosovo.

The government is ruled by a committee of eight, again with rotating chairmanship, with no provision for a president after Tito.

"It cannot last," a Western diplomat said, speaking of the collective leadership. "It is inconceivable that we would introduce any changes," a prominent Yugoslav countered.

Most seem convinced that the structures of succession now in place will inevitably yield to change. Many forecast the emergence of a small, elite executive group that would include some new faces. Others are convinced that ultimately another superstar will rise to take Tito's place.

"We are already in the post-Tito period," one leading Yugoslav said.

"Tito's role has been negligible for the last few years," a retired government official commented. There seems to be little question of that. But Tito's role, however small in recent years, has included settlement of disputes that might otherwise have gotten out of hand. When he dies, he will be missed in that role. The void could be perilous. Yugoslavs talk of three threats within the coun-

- The tottering economy, "I put that first," an elder statesman said. High inflation, a trade imbalance and an overheated economy are negatively affecting almost everyone.

- Jealousy among the six republics and two

- A "fifth column" that includes a small group "people who would like to invite the Soviet Union in to solve our problems," and provocateurs whose rumor-mongering troubles the leadership.

There is more economic dependence on the Soviet bloc than Yugoslavia would like. That is a critical factor behind new efforts to pry bigger concessions in technology and trade from the European Common Market. More than half of Yugoslavia's trade is with the Soviet bloc and one-third of its oil comes from the Soviet Union. Some are convinced that the friction among the republics and provinces is at an all-time low point, that cooperation has never been better. There is no evidence to refute that belief, but the subject is still There have been unconfirmed reports of some dissident arrests recently. Government officials say that there has been no such action but that the dissidents are known and watched. All agree that not many are involved.

There are some old Stalinists whose first love is Moscow and some Croatian nationalists who would like to dismember the republic.

Other potential problems appear to be under control. Bulgarian provocations have not seemed to stir any sympathy among the more than one million Macedonians who, according to Bulgaria, are rightfully part of Bulgaria, and the bleak situation in Albania seems to be an effective deterrent to any nanonalist movement among the more than one million Albanians in Kosovo Province.

"The real threat is perceived as external," a military expert said. "That is evident in the whole organization of security.

But the defense capability has severe limitations. exacerbated in the last four years by the Soviet Union's cutbacks on repairs and repleements.

The military was armed largely by the West in the first years after Yugoslavia's break with Stalinis Moscow in 1948. But in the decade from 1965 to 1975 a rapprochement with Moscow turned the supply picture around; 96 per cent of the purchase: in that period came from the Soviet bloc.

The best tanks are Soviet M-54s and M-55s, with aging 100 mm. guns and outdated gunsights. The best fighter is the MiG 21. The early-warning rada: system is of East bloc origin, and inadequate. And matters have been made worse by the slowdown o cancellation of repairs and replacement parts.

There are reports of tentative agreement to make the improved Soviet T-72 tank available to Yugoslavia. The Yugoslavs are also shopping in the West The need coincides, unfortunately for Yugoslavitwith a desperate shortage of funds

On defense matters, Yugoslavia is a prisoner c its treasured policy of nonalignment. Both East an West deny their best weapons to those in between Yet nonalignment has not bought the insurance from aggression that Tito had hoped for, as he an the other Yugoslavs were reminded when the Soviets moved into Afghanistan. Secrets of Shanghai's atomic lab

By Jonathan Mirsky

LONDON-

"Let's talk in the office."

"No. Don't take me there." "Why"

"I'm afraid ... I can't take any more stress." Various settings suggest themselves for this dialogue. Among the least likely is Shanghai's Atomic Nuclear Research Institute. Equally unpredictable is the source of the story: Shanghai's leading newspaper. Wen Hui Baa. Investigative reporting has come to China.

Reporting in the Western sense is only just beginning to appear in the Chinese press, hitherto limited to proclamations, speeches, and other manifestations of policy. Now there are even crime stories. The Chinese scene is being presented as news for the first time since the fall of the "Gang" in

The probe into the Shanghai Nuclear Research Institute revealed disgruntled staff, in sharp contrast to the endlessly cheerful workers usually on show in the press, and Won Hui Bao challenged the party to step in and clean up the mess.

The expose was an easily imaginable one of internal bickering, resentment, and slack leadership, especially by the party. None of the difficulties was directly attributed by the paper to the Gang of Four, the explanation commonly offered for shortfalls in any area of Chinese life.

Brushing aside such a convenient alibi, Wen Hui Bao 's editor pointed out: "some three years have elapsed since the downfall of the Gang of Four. Why can't the party's policy toward intellectuals be implemented effectively in this research institute?" The answer, for the editor, lav not in class warfare, but in bitchy office politics. This is how the story unfolded: Wen Hui Bao 's reporter discovers one of the institute's leading lights in "the quiet corner of a teahouse." He is Zhang Jiahua, a nuclear physicist who returned from America in 1949. Asked about his work he 'answered curtly," It's hard to get things done," and changes the subject. He cannot, he says, bear any more strain.

The reporter subsequently learns that, after his return from the U.S. Zhang was treated as a spy for many years. Later, during the Gang period, he nearly died. Although cleared of all charges he remains under suspicion in the institute, never allowed, for instance, to attend important meetings

Several days with other institute scientists and cadres uncover discontent with the administration. Scientifie work, arbitrarily begun and peremptorily canceled, is described as chaotic.

When tackled by Wen Hui Bao 's man, the party secretary "scratches his head and in an annoved voice" admits that matters have escaped from the party's supervision. Party committee members, the reporter hears, gossip about the staff and leak confidential matters which then become "the talk of the

The reporter searches for Huang Transheng, a ? senior cyclotron engineer and party member who had a nervous breakdown under the Gang and it now in hospital "resting from overwork." Since Huang cannot be visited, the journalist interview: the head of the cyclotron unit, who accuses Huang of looking down on workers and of cockness Another colleague refutes this. Huang Tiansben; has been sick all this time because of what he ha heard about himself."

Inherent in these disclosures in the continuing Chinese dependence on political authority to resolve even scientific and personal tangles. The reporter calls on "the bigher-level party" to come (ex to the rescue." The comrades of the whole institute are waiting."—(OFNS)

The world goes to Washington

By Christopher Dickey and Donnel Nunes

WASHINGTON— On any given day, people from all over the world arrive in Washington. Some come as visitors, to work or to play, to protest or plead. Others plan to spend a few years here as students, diplomats or political exiles. And then there are those who come to stay — the growing numbers of

They are making Washington something it has never been before - an international city. The signs of change are everywhere. Washington is not yet Paris or London, not by a long shot. But it is a far different city than the Washington of 20 or 10 or even five years

Parisian-style sidewalk cafes in many Washington neighborhoods now outnumber luncheonettes, and scores of new restuarants have opened in recent years offering every-thing from Ethiopian to Thai cuisine.

The faces one sees on the streets, the languages one hears on the snhway, even the names encountered in the telephone directory are daily reminders of the myriad countries from which Washington now draws its population. The world seems to be moving to ashington's backyard. The process hegan in the 1950s as dozens of emerging nations, eager to ratify their membership in the international community, opened embassies here. Even as Washingtoo received hundreds of these new international envoys — swelling the number of diplomatic families here to its present 2,300 — the U.S. government sent thnusands of Americans to foreign lands. They went off hy the planeload, representing not just the State Department hut also AID, USIA and a swarm of other agencies,

Many of these Americans came back to Washington in the 1960s and 1970s not just with the usual collection of artifacts, but with new international interests, tastes and friends. The internationalization of Washington was also fueled by the rapid growth of such organizations as the world Bank, the International Monetary Fund and the Pan American : Health Organization, whose headquarters staffs here have expanded sharply.

International organizations here today boast more than 4,000 foreign employees, contributing a melange of sarongs, dashikis, turbans and flowing Arah gowns to the rush-bour street scenes along Pennsylvania

The pace of change increased most dramatically in the 70s, when a sagging dollar suddenly made Washington an increasingly attractive vacation option for European and Japanese visitors.

By the thousands they came. And Washington today makes them welcome. Foreign tourists casually handing a stack of Swiss francs or German marks to the cashier of a Washington hotel as they check out, however, get a far warmer reception than they would have if they attempted to pay their bill in a foreign currency in the 1950s. As they came to visit, many wealthier tourists decided that Washington was a place where at least some of their money might like to find a home. The price of a house or a co-op may strike many Americans as high, hut real estate here looks like a bargain compared to prices in Paris or Munich, At the upper income levels, foreign investors have begun to shape and stimulate the patterns of investment, the tastes and the fashions of the city.

This is only one side of the internationalization of Washington.

There were other forces at work in the 1970s as well - the flood of Southeast refugees, increasing concern over the problems posed by illegal aliens, the rising voice of Hispanies in local politics.

These currents, also part of the internationalization of the city, demand public attention, for they touch the everyday life of every person who considers Washington At the lower levels of the pay and prestige scale, Washingtonians now compete for jobs with foreign-born workers who hring a new sense of possibility and perseverance to occupations that Americans too often scorn as too menial. The mom and pop who runs the corner grocery store in Washington today are as likely to have been born in Knrea as in the District of Columbia. Washington's schools now must cope with even greater numbers of children for whom English is a second language. Five percent of the total public school enrollment in the Washington area - 21,628 pupils - are citizens of foreign countries. Washington's streets, with increasing frequency, are the scenes of protest over issues of great importance mainly to countries that most Americans would have trouble finding оп а тар,

The city's racial and ethnic frictions no longer are plainly etched in black and white, hut rise from the complex tones of clashing cultures and new, often alien values.

Some essentially foreign-born groups are seeking successfully to influence the tenor and policies of the local government - which is now their government as much as anyone

The precise number of new immigrants here is hard to pinpoint. Estimates of the foreign-horn population now living in the metropolitan area wh.: are not American citizens range upwards from 100,000, but it is a population that is so mobile, so new and in some cases so hidden from the government that accurate figures do not yet exist. Washington has reached the stage where private groups and the city government have begun not only to recognize its international character hut to try and huild on it. Mayor Marian Barry, for instance, has a full-time staff member whose husiness it is to promote the development of international investment in Washington. As a Londoner who now makes his home here remarked recently over a cup of coffee (in an Italian restaurant served by a Central American waiter), "Great cities are not made. Great cities become."

And what Washington becomes, ultimately, will be determined not hy grand plans hut hy the unguided, collective impact of the individuals and families who arrive here their successes, their failures, their expecta-

Finance minister threatens resignation

Dutch coalition affirms stand

THE HAGUE, Feb. 22 (R) - The Dutch government said it had no intention of stepping down, despite the threatened resignation of Finance Minister Frans Andriessen in a row over public spending cuts.

The cabinet published plans to slash public expenditure by an extra three billion guilders ($ 1.56 billion) this year.

Andriessen has rejected the cuts as insufficient for holding down a record budget deficit.

Parliament discussed the issue until around midnight, then adjourned its debate until next Tuesday without taking a vote.

Leaders of the Christian Democratic and Liberal (VVD) Parties, which make up the ruling center-right coalition, defended their package of measures as a correct response to worsening national economic situation. They said no other minister would joio Andriessen in tendering his resignation.

Andriessen's resignation offer has not yet been formally accepted by Queen Juliana. The other members of the cabinet will meet Friday and are expected to consider the appointment of his successor.

The cabinet said a restriction of the inflation indexed wage rise could mean that workers would not receive compensation for

Half the proposed cuts in spending will come from reductions in the central government budget, partly through giving departments less compensation for higher prices. The government would also save on contributions to social benefit funds, public officials' salaries, planned contributions to local authority and provincial funds and contributions in the health field. The government said it intended to introduce tougher laws to encourage energy saving. It was also determined to increase the price of exported Dutch gas. Economics Minister Gijsbert van Aardenne would continue talks on this with West Germany, Belgium and France. Labor Party leader Joop den Uyl led a verbal assault from the opposition on the government during a parliamentary debate on the crisis.

Den Uyl, a former prime minister, said the imminent departure of Andriessen had deprived the cabinet of its right to remain in office. Andriessen was the spiritual father of the government's policy of public spending cuts and he had come to the conclusion that this policy could not be carried out. Den Uyl

British present immigration law to clamp down on 'bogus marriages'

LONDON, Feb. 22 (AP) - The government presented new amendments to Britain's immigration rules designed to clamp down on abuses of the present system. A principal aim is to stop is the admission of men through bogus marriages and engagements.

The changes have been worked out in discussions with lawmakers and immigrant organizations under authority delegated by Parliament to Home Secretary William Whitelaw.

The new rules presented to Parliament by Whitelaw will apply to all immigration decisions taken after March 1. Although under the delegated legislation they do not require Parliamentary approval before they come into force, they can be halted if a resolution is passed in Parliament objecting to them. Under the new rules a husband or fiance will be ineligible to come to live in Britain if the immigration authorities are satisfied that the marriage or engagement was contracted with little other object than to get the man into Britain.

Threats, riots on increase

MADRID, Feb. 22 (R) - The managing director of the Spanish News Agecny EFE, Luis Maria Anson, said he bad been threatened with death by an extreme rightwing group if seven suspected rightist guerrillas now detained were not freed by April 1.

The agency quoted Anson as saying he had been told about the threat by Minister Antonio Ibanez Freire. It was reported to be contained in a document found by police investigating the "Spanish Basque Batta-

EFE said the group wanted the release of four men and a woman currently on trial in the "Atocha massacre" case.

They are accused of involvement in the killing of four Communist lawyers and an assistant at an office in Madrid's Atocha street three years ago. He said the group was also demanding the release of two members of the neo-Fascist movement Fuerza Nueva (New Force) detained in connection with the murder of a Basque student girl earlier this

Meanwhile, riot police dispersed rival groups who clashed outside the Justice Palace after the morning session of a trial of Francoists accused of the slaying.

The incident involved youths clad in the blue shirt of the right-wing Falange Party and Communist sympathizers on Thursday.

The former shouted for amnesty for the defendants while the other group called for heavy prison terms, sought by the prosecution in the trial.

Club-swinging police dispersed the demonstrators, some of whom were treated for bruises. No arrests were reported.

Another Falange Party member was expelled from the courtroom during Thursday's proceedings and banded over to judicial authorities, charged with public disorder.

On bearing one of the prosecution witnesses call the massacre of Communists "an infamous massacre," one dissatisfied youth shouted, "It was five pigs that they killed."

Tanzania threatens troop pullout if Uganda leaders continue quarrel

UGANDA, Feb. 22 (AP) — A Ugandan government source quoted President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania as saying he would order Tanzanian soldiers out of Uganda if Ugandan leaders did not resolve their quarrels. Nyerere cited Tanzania's economic troubles on Thursday in threatening the troop pullout, but the threat appeared mainly as an attempt to end the disputes between Ugandan President Godfrey Binaisa and the legislature, the Ugandan source said.

Tanzania invaded Uganda a year ago to depose Oictator Idi Amin. After the war, 820,000 Tanzanian recruits remained in Uganda to act as the sole security force while the country's own scattered arms were

Removal of the Tanzanians would leave Uganda without an effective army, and apparently at the mercy of armed units of several thousand men believed loyal to individual leaders rather than to the national government.

But not military arms

West Germany to continue Pakistan aid

BONN, West Germany, Feb. 22 (AP) -Chancellor Helmut Schmidt said West Germany would continue providing economic assistance to India and Pakistan but would not send arms to the Zia government in wake of the Soviet incursion into Afghanistan.

Schmidt made the statement during a meeting with foreign reporters in response to a question about whether the Bonn government would provide arms to Pakistan.

He reminded reporters of West German laws that restrict the distribution of weapons outside the NATO alliance without special permission of the Federal Security Council, The United States has offered military aid to Pakistan to shore up its defenses following the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan last December.

U.S. President Jimmy Carter's decision to come to the aid of Pakistan's president Muhammad Zia ul-Hag has led to further strains in Washington's relations with India.

During his remarks, Schmidt reminded his audience that India has been one of the leading recipients of West German economic aid in the third world.

He also noted that West Germany had sought to maintain an even-handed policy in its relations with both Delhi and Islamabad. The chancellor was asked whether he thought the Soviet incursion into Afghanistan was directed at securing a warm-water port and securing oil supplies in the Persian Gulf region.

That is a bit of an incomplete description of the actual situation," he said. "The presence of Soviet warplanes, and not just transport planes and helicopters, but also fighter bombers on Afghanistan's airports considerably increases their reach to the south, to the southeast, to the southwest and to the west when compared with the range they had when still stationed in the area of Samarkhand or Taskent," Schmidt said.

"It is indeed a strategic shift of power, or as I said earlier, a change of balance."

OPEC strategists agree on long-term price policy strategy committee led by Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani Friday reached wide agreement on long-term strategy, oil ministers said.

Venezuela strongly supported a recommendation that, in the long term, OPEC (Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries) should adjust oil prices each three months taking into account three factors.

These were Western inflation, currency fluctuations and growth in the Gross National Product of Industrialized Countries. Under the plan the price of a barrel of oil would be linked to a basket of currencies and average inflation rate.

Asked if the five-member long-term strategy committee had agreed to recommend such a mechanism to the rest of OPEC, Sheikh Yamani said, "That is almost in line with what we are suggesting."

Sheikh Yamani said the committee's report would go before an extraordinary meeting of all OPEC oil ministers, probably in May.

If approved it would then go to an OPEC summit in Baghdad in November.

Attending the two-day meeting, besides Sheikh Yamani were the oil ministers of Kuwait, Venezuela, Algeria and Iraq and the governor of the Iranian Central Bank.

OPEC seeks a long-term strategy to enable it to make orderly price adjustments so as to maintain the real price of its oil in a way which

Following its meeting in Caracas last November its members have been fixing prices themselves. These range from $ 26 a barrel charged by Saudi Arabia for its light crude to around $ 34 charged by some African producers.

Sheikh Khalifa said, however, that he believed a unified price could be restored by August or September. The extraordinary oil ministers' meeting in May will only discuss long-term strategy, Sheikh Yamani emphasized. Prices for the short term will probably next be reviewed at a price fixing OPEC meeting due to be held at Algiers in June.

Algerian Oil Minister Bel Kacem Nabi said as the five oil ministers and the Iranian Central Bank governor started their talks that there was little likelihood of a long-term agreement on specific and concrete aims as long as OPEC failed to agree on immediate

"We have first to agree on a point of departure," he said.

Nabi was apparently endorsing objections to the London meeting pressed by Iranian Oil Minister Ali Akbar Mninfar.

Moinfar said in Tehran four days agn he did not plan to attend the two-day London meeting because it was a waste of time to discuss the long term when ather urgent issues were undecided.

Iraqi Oil Minister Teh Abdel-Karim and other ministers stressed earlier that no shortterm issues such as prices would be discussed and that these questions would come up at the regular conference of OPEC ministers in Algiers in June.

Substitute plan for national reserves urged

LONDON, Feb. 22 (R) - A group of international experts Friday called for urgent agreement on a substitute scheme for national currency as a means of stabilizing the world monetary situatinn.

The independent group strongly backed proposals to create a special "substitution account" in which the International Monetary Fund (IMF) would provide its own sole currency, Special Drawing Rights (SDRS), to central banks in exchange for dollar deposit.

The account would promote SDRs as a reserve asset and offer an alternative diversification of currency reserves by central banks which led to exchange rates fluctuations, the group of 30" experts said in a report published Friday.

Failure to reach an agreement on a new scheme "would risk adding to the volatility of exchange rates and the instability of current international monetary arrangements," they said.

The group also called for explicit discussions among central banks on their reserve currency holdings to calm speculative fears in exchange markets and a major role for the private sector in the substitution plan.

The group of 30 was established in December 1978 with a grant from the Rokefeller Foundation to go into basic problems facing the international economic system.

It is chaired by former IMF Managing Director Johannes Witteveen. The study group which prepared the report included Christopher McMahnn, whn is to become deputy governor of the Bank of England next month, and Reserve bank of India governor I.G. Patel.

The complex substitution account plan was discussed by the world's five leading industrial nations - the United States, West Germany, France, Britain and Canada at a secret meeting in Frankfurt

They were expected to brief the world's big dollar reserve hulders, mainly the oil exporting countries, on the scheme.

. SDR's sometimes called "paper gnld". were introduced as a supplementary reserve for the world monetary system in

The group's study said the need for a substitute scheme had gained added urgency because of the prospect that mamber states of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) were likely to run a substantial current account surplus for a number of years.

Turkey to receive $330m

International Monetary Fund will grant Turkey $ 330 million worth of credit in a major Western effort to rescue the key NATO ally from economic collapse, monetary officials said.

In the first of two moves that added up to a major breakthrough for the Turks, the IMF announced Thursday it would extend Turkey about $ 94 million in new credits from a special bail-out fund.

Then monetary sources said the IMF had also agreed to let Turkey resume use of a blocked line of existing credit. The amount remaining in that line is the equivalent of $ 236 million in IMF Special Drawing Rights (SDRS).

Drawings on that account stopped when the Turkish government changed bands a few months ago.

Tarkey, which borders the Soviet Union and Iran and is a keystone of NATO's southeastern flank, has beavy international debts, along with soaring domestic inflation and dependence on imported oil.

Monetary experts said the IMF decisions were crucial to the success of a Western allied effort, led by West Germany, to get fresh international aid for Turkey in return for economic reforms proposed by the Ankara

Japanese firm plansEgyptian oil production

TOKYO, Feb. 22 (AP) — The Egyptian Petroleum Development Corp. (EPDC) of Japan said it plans to produce about 8,000 barrels of crude oil per day in an oil field in Egypt beginning in July. EPDC officials Thursday said the Japanese firm drilling oil holes in the 527-square kilometer area about 300 kilometers southeast of Cairo at a total cost of 5.4 billion yen ($ 22 million) confirmed oil deposits in six holes. Each hole would have a daily capacity of producing more than 1,000 barrels of crude oil, the officials said. EPDC . has been prospecting the area since November 1976 under a production share contract with Egyptian government-nwned Egyptian Petroleum Corp. The contract calls for EPDC to supply fund and technology in return for nbtaining 40.5 per cent of crude oil in the mining area, the officials said.

EPDC is owned by the government-owned Japan National Oil Corporation, Mitsui Oil Development Co. and Daiichi Oil Develop-days on the extended credit, declined to state the conditions.

The bidding:

1 NT Pass Openlog lead - jack plays in bridge, bot, unfortunately, il is also one of the most abused. Take this case where South is in four spades. Let's say West leads the jack of diamonds, covered by the king and ace, and East South ruffs the third mond and cashes the A-K of trumps, then leads the jack of clubs and lets it ride, the losing to the king.

Eventually he also toses a heart trick and goes down one. Superficially the outcome eems normal, but actually declarer misplayed the hand.
With proper play he makes the contract. It is wrong to take a clob finesse. The better method of play is to enter dummy with a trump at trick four and lead a low club four and lead a new that towards the jack.

East is helpless against this play. U he takes the king, declarer follows low and later discards two bearts on the A-Q of clubs. U East does not take his king, South wins with the his king, south whis with the jack, plays a club to the ace and ruffs a club. When the king falls, the queen becomes trick number ten. PL

Admittedly, playing the club suit this way is abnormal, but al the same time it is very rational. Declarer cannot make the contract unless he makes three club tricks, and therefore the finesse cannot be the proper play.

By far the best chance of making the hand is to assume that East has the king. A low club play from dummy whenever East has less than four clubs to the king, or whenever East has either four or five clubs and makes the mistake of going up with the king. By contrast, attempting a club finesse is a virtually hopeless proposition

Tito kept alive by kidney machine

Doctors offer little hope for recovery

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, Feh. 22 (AP) - President Josip Broz Tito's doctors confirmed Friday they were using a dialysis machine to keep him alive, but a top official said the government was not counting on his recovery.

"I hope he will recover, but we are aware that every man has to dic" the official said. "Some die early, some die later." said the official who asked the limited number of reporters invited to speak with him not to identify him. The government announced that foreign minister Josip Vrhovec had left Yugoslavia for Bangladesh and India, making at least part of a trip he cancelled last week because of Tito's illness.

Both the restricted press meeting and the Vrhovee disclosure seemed intended as signals that Yugoslavia's other leaders were proceeding with business without Tito.

An advisory appeared worded to avoid raising hopes that the long-predicted use of a dialysis device had alleviated the gravity of Tito's condition.

Tito's doctors on Feb. 13 conceded he was suffering beart weaknesses as well, but since then they have never mentioned the problem. 'Owing to the weakened function of the kidneys, chemodialysis has been successfully implemented in the past few days," Friday's bulletin said.

"Other intensive measures of treatment are being applied as well but the general state of bealth of President Tito is without substantial change." As a result of Tito's worsening condition, Yugoslav officials have disclosed that the No. 2 man in the country's state government has been allowed to make his

Josip Broz Tito

Tito, a government spokesman said earlier, had become too ill this month even to sign messages he had earlier approved for sending to certain foreign leaders,

Spokesman Mirko Kalezic told the National News Agency Tanjug that Lazar Koliscvski had been authorized by Tito 10 relay the messages, and had also relayed some of his own. It was the first time that Kolisevski, vice oresident of Yugoslavia's nine-man collecnive state presidency, had taken on such authority while Tito was still in Yugoslavia.

The disclosure was widely seen as a Yugoslav effort to demonstrate that the collective leadership apparatus designed to run the country without Tito if necessary was functioning smoothly.

Kalezic said foreign Minister Josip Vrhovec passed Tito and Kolisevski messages to the Soviet, American, Cuban and Guinean ambassadors in Belgrade.

Vrhovec was to deliver yet another Tito message to Indian leader Indira Gandhi on a visit to her country. His trip to India and three other Asian countries was cancelled last week because of Tito's illness and no new dates have been disclosed.

Tanjug said the Tito messages expressed the Yugoslav leaders concern about world problems and the decline of detente. Their wording reflected official Yugoslav concern over the Soviet invasion of Afgbanistan and East-West tensions over European arms arrangements.

Tito's doctors Thursday said his condition continued to be grave.

Tito's left leg was amputated Jan. 2 in a last-ditch effort to resolve a circulation bloc-

Medical sources in Belgrade this week said that the limited information to the public on Tito's illness gave little reason for hope that he would survive.

UNITED NATIONS, Feb. 22 (AP) -U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, with Britain's consent, will send a representative with supporting staff to Rhodesia in a day or two to observe the pre-independence election there next week, well placed sources said.

The informants, asking not to be identified. denied that the U.N. Security Council would have anything to do with the group. Council members emerging from private talks Wednesday night said the council had agreed to send a three-member observer mission to Rhodesia.

Tanzanian president Julius Nyerere, critical of Britain's transitional administration in Rhodesia, asked Waldheim last week to visit there bimself. U.N. Spokesman Rudolf Stajduhar said Tuesday that Britain's reaction was that while it would not consider a visit to Rhodesia by Waldheim appropriate, it would accept a U.N. observer there.

Britain is governing Rhodesia during the transition to internationally recognized independence detailed in the Lancaster House Agreement, which various Rhodesian factions including guerrilla groups signed in London last December, Sir Anthony Pacsons, Britain's U.N. ambassador, spent two bours in conference late Thursday with Waldheim and other U.N.

At a news briefing bere earlier, Tirivafi John Kangai, U.N. observer for Robert Mugabe's Zimbabwe African National Union, said the United Nations should send observers to Zimbabwe, or Rhodesia, 'immediately' and they should stay there even after the election.

Kangai charged that Lord Soames, the British governor, bad taken the vote away from large sections of the population of Rhodesia in areas where ZANU had the loyalty of a majority of the people.

Gold price drops in N.Y. trading

2010 neared $ 6/0 an ounce in Europe Thursday, but turned lower in late New York trading where profit-taking simmered it down to$ 650. The U.S. dollar lost ground against the Canadian dollar and British pound.

Gold for February delivery dipped 5 dollars to $ 656.50 on New York's Commodity Exchange and was off by 5 dollars to $ 650 in Republic National Bank of New York trading.

It seems we're more or less in a new range for gold price, a New York Trader said, with a $ 600 bottom and "good selling, good profittaking" near $ 680. The trader described bullion markets as "very cautious," adding "some people got destroyed" in the price retreat since January.

By Jihad Khazen

Years ago, more, in fact, than I care to remember, when I was an earnest schoolboy, I began formulating a general theory to explain a certain staggering discre-pancy, which I found so obvious as to need no proof, and to which no thinker seemed to address himself satisfactorily.

My theory was based on what probably happened during the "dark ages" — something I took rather literally then, as of a light being turned off, making everything go black all of a sudden - when someone, for a motive I couldn't fathom, suddenly took away all of the Arab nation as it existed then, the whole kith and caboodle, and stashed it somewhere away from sight. That same one then replaced it with a completely different nation - one which looked and sounded exactly like the original, but was totally and absolutely different.

My theory, and the modern generation of scholars is welcome to it, helped to account for the difference between the Arabs in their history — especially that glory-packed century or thereabouts between the death of the Prophet and the conquest of Spain — and the degraded present. It is as though some one made a huge fortune in a very short time, and bas been friterring it away ever since. Or, as my theory would bave it, it is as though someone found a fortune whose owner has disappeared, and set about spending it as though it was going out of fashion. I remember that, to prove my theory, I made some investigations into the similarines and differences between the Arabs of that time and those at present who, for some reason, claim that name. The result was the great discovery that, although whoever it was who made the switch was very clever indeed in making the two nations sound the same, there were in fact very important differences.

This was not merely the greatness of the rhetoric of the olden days, that concise-ness and directness which contrasts so strangely with the billowing clouds of gas we have to endure in our time. It was also the spirit itself which shone through the speech. One of the great examples was that of Abu Bakr, the first Caliph, who, on accession, addressed the people simply thus, "It has been given to me to rule over you, though I am not your better. Obey me as long as I obey God and his prophet. Disobey me if I disobey."

Or that great leader who was speaking at length one day, and paused a while, proud of his ability, only to be interrupted by a man from the people, who told him that brevity is the chiefest of rhetorical virtues. The orator asked the man, "What then is bad speech?" To which the man immediately answered, "What you have been disbing us up to now.

So wby aren't Arabs these days like before in the old days, frank and not full of hypocrisy, because they would be thrown in jail, or even worse.

Israel has already expressed its strong opposition to the proposed British initiative. The Begin government wants to keep the European countries out of the Middle East peace process, because it does not trust their motives and cannot exert the kind of pressur on them that it exercises in the United States.

Egypt, on the other hand, favors the British move. President Anwar Sadat sees progress on the Palestinian question as an essential step toward restoring his credibility both at home and in the rest of the world.

Sources say the British government is anxious to begin playing a major role in the Middle East peace process, but has been reluctant to undertake any initiative without first securing American approval.

Earlier Thursday Israeli Deputy Premier Yigael Yadin accused Britain of trying to disrupt the Israeli-Egyptian peace process by making a diplomatic initiative to "placate" the PLO, Reuters reported.

In an address to the Hebrew Union College in Jerusalem, professor Yadin joined the growing chorus of Israeli resentment over British ideas on ereating a revised version of Resolution 242, the standard United Nations formula for Middle East peace.
